Douglas and Lincoln.

These who witnessed Lincoln's first inauguration will not soon forget one little scene which then occurred. The President elect came forward upon the platform prepared at the east front of the Capitol, with his natural awkwardness increased by the momentous circumstances of the occasion and by a gorgeous wardrobe, in which it was evident he felt exceedingly uncomfortable. The stiff dress-coat, vest, and pantaloons of black broadcloth were enough of themselves to disturb his mental and physical equilibrium, but to these were added other inconveniences in the shape of a bran new silk hat and a ponderous gold headed cane. The case he managed to put away in a corner, but the disposition of the hat perplexed him greatly. It was too good to throw away; too nice, as he thought, to rest upon the rough boards; so, for a minute, at least, poor Lincoln stood there in the gaze of assembled thousands, grasping his hat desperately, and seeking in vain for a safe place to deposit it. Douglas, who sat immediately in the rear, saw the embarrassment of his rival, and rising, took the shining heaver from his sorely bothered owner, and held it during the delivery of the inaugural address.

It is doubtful whether, five years before,

Stephen A. Douglas ever dreamed that he was destined to hold the hat of Abraham Lincoln while that individual was appearing for the first time as President of the United States.

The Court convened last Monday.

Judge Chatfield, presiding. From present appearances the term will continue during next week. Up to this time several small cases have been disposed of.

The Grand Jury has undertaken a big job, that of indicting the saloon keepers of the County at large for selling liquor without license. Scores of witnesses have been examined to prove the parties gulty.

Would it be more expedient to indict the County authorities for allowing the sale of liquors without proper license. We think they are beating around the bush in a very singular way.

Time will tell.

CHASKA THURSDAY APRIL 17 1873.

The Connecticut Election.

The election held in Connecticut on Monday resulted in a sweeping Democratic and Liberal triumph. The Democratic candidate for Governor, Ingersoll, was elected by 3,600 majority over both the Administration and Temperance candidates. Nearly every town in the State shows an Administration loss. Two of the four Congressmen elected are also Democrats, and the Legislature will be close, yet in doubt.

Death of Gen. Canby.

The reported death of Gen. Edward S. Canby, some months ago, of the army, at the hands of the treacherous chief of the Modoc Indians, will cause a thrill of indignation throughout the country. It is lamentable, indeed, that an able and gallant officer, who survived the battles of the civil war, should thus lose his life, and the country, the continuance of valuable service. Better far the extermination of every miserable savage within its borders.

After the defeat and slaughter of our troops, some months ago, by the Modocs, it seems incredible that a "peace policy" should have been pursued towards them, until they had, in turn, been severely chastised, driven from their fastnesses, and compelled to sue for mercy. It is to be hoped that this event will induce the Government to pursue a different policy towards Indians that are notoriously hostile, and have not yet been taught to respect and fear its power.

MURDER WILL OUT.

From the Little Rock Republican.

There has been a rumor afloat, for the past few days, with respect to the probability of ascertaining who was the murderer of Gen. Thomas C. Hindman, who was assassinated at Helena on the 29th of September, 1868, and we are glad to know that his widow is now satisfied that his political enemies had nothing to do with it.

From information received by her through anonymous letters, of the authenticity of which she is said to be satisfied, it was not his political enemies who did the killing, and it was caused by an amour of his with a lady either in Georgia or Helena. Mrs. H. on last Monday came to Memphis to consult with her friend, Judge Underwood, of Helena, who has known her since infancy. The lady had in her possession two letters, one dated the 17th of March and the other the 28th, stating that if she would come to the Appeal office in company with Judge Underwood, the writer would reveal facts that would lead to the conviction of the guilty parties, all of whom were well known and had been in terms of intimacy with Hindman. (Owing to the result of her visit to Memphis we are not advised.)

Deeper borings in the Saginaw valley, it has recently been demonstrated, materially increase the strength of brine, and leave little doubt that the rock salt bed is close to the brine bearing deposits. On geological grounds there is reason to suspect that salt may be found within easy reach through central Indiana, Illinois, and probably southern Iowa, when proper efforts are made to test the matter. As it underlies the gypsum, that mineral works with some accuracy the existence of its useful associate. Possibly it may yet be found in the great central basin of the continent much farther north than the States we have indicated. There is yet to develop vast resources as yet unsuspected.

As a party statistician, Ben Butler is a success. He reduces morality to figures, and justifies the practice of crime, by demonstrating that a great swindle aggregates only a small sum out of each individual. Last fall he illustrated his doctrine, by showing that the Mobilizer stole, granting all that was alleged against Congressmen, only cost the people five cents a head. He has now cyphered the back pay law, and shows that it comes to only three cents each to the population. To the remonstrance of a Massachusetts constituent against this plunder of the treasury he actually replied three cents as his share, and offered to keep sending that sum yearly. This is his answer to a great crime—Forty millions stolen is only a dollar each. Strange that Americans are so parsimonious as to begrudge that small sum. This is Butlerian Grantism.

The English Wheat Demand.

From the Boston Globe.

It has been ascertained that the actual consumption of wheat in the United Kingdom during the last six months was larger than was estimated, while the supply will be considerably less, making a difference of 16,000,000 bushels. The Liverpool Courier estimates the quantity of prospective supplies at 32,000,000 bushels, and adds that to all present appearances we are now worse off with reference to our probable supplies than we were six months ago. The estimate then formed was carefully made on what appeared to be reliable data. It was smaller than some of the estimates put forth at the same time; unfortunately it threatens to be in itself too large. But that our wants will be met there is no doubt. They may be of necessity somewhat curtailed by higher prices, but higher prices will bring what is needed. The visible supply of wheat in America on March 24, as published in the Globe last week, was 7,413,589 bushels, against 9,273,110 bushels, as compared with the same time in 1872. The prospects of good prices will place the market every-where at a high level of grain.

Connecticut Election.

The State of Connecticut held an election on Monday last for State officers and Congressmen. Last fall the Republican majority for Grant was 4,738. This spring the tables are completely turned, and the Democratic candidate (Ingersoll) for Governor, is elected by nearly 4,000 majority. The Legislature will be close, and Congressmen are evenly divided—a loss of one Republican member. The St. Paul Press assumes that the disgraceful conduct of the last Republican Congress has been the cause of the Republican defeat. If so we may yet hope that the people as still clinging to some rights and essay to rebuke some wrongs. Until this time, the plea of most Republican partisans has been that Congressmen would steal, and it was useless to evince any displeasure at their little indiscretions, but if we are to interpret this election as a sign of the times there is yet hope for the country.

The Glencoe Register, a Republican paper, of the 10th inst., expresses the statement of the Press of the 3d, in regard to Hon. H. A. Child. The Register says that the man, Weidewich, who alleged that Mr. Child attempted to get a portion of his money from him, has been haunted with the idea that somebody was after his money, and intimates that the only censurable act on the part of Mr. Child's was the performance of "an act of kindness towards a man who has not sense enough to appreciate a favor." "Just as we expected."

—There was a general feeling of dissatisfaction when Congress adjourned without having shed any light on the illegal corruption attending the sale of the Pacific Mail subsidy. The rumor was on every tongue at the time, that the Pacific Company had paid out $500,000 to the lobby and to members of Congress to allow the subsidy. It is very certain that the matter will not be allowed to drop, and that next winter the investigation will be continued. A promise made of developments which will throw the Credit Mobilier scandal quite into the shade.

A New Story of Mr. Lincoln.

A Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, who recently interviewed Chief Justice Chase, saw a fine bust of Abraham Lincoln in the room.

Observing me looking at it, the Chief Justice came over and stood by me. "You admire him," he said, looking up at the portrait.

"More than any man in history," I replied.

"He has a martyr's crown, and he had all the traits of a martyr. He was true and simplicity personified, and unselfish to a fault; he was absolutely devoid of a sense of fear. He used to ride in and out of the camps and to the Soldiers' Home alone at all hours of the day and night until after he was shot at, we insisted upon his having a body guard. I do not suppose he was without ambition, but he never let it stand in the way of an obligation or the sense of right."

"Gave nor Baker gave me an illustration of that quality in Mr. Lincoln the other day," I remarked.

"What was it?"

"When the draft just previous to Mr. Lincoln's re-election was ordered, leading politicians of Indiana thought it injudicious, and appointed a committee, of which Governor Baker made one, to write upon the President. The remonstrated with him against the draft without producing any effect, and finally urged the danger of his defeat in case Indiana should go against him, as they believed it would, if the draft went on. 'It is of no consequence,' the President replied, 'whether I am elected or not. The country must be saved. We must have soldiers.' The Union must be restored." Governor Baker went out from the presence of Mr. Lincoln feeling in a manner rebuked for having allowed party considerations to influence him enough to make the plea.

DISTRICT COURT.

Court is still in session and will probably not bring its deliberations to a close until Saturday afternoon. We are thus unable to give a list of the cases tried and the decisions of the Judge and Jury thereon.

The Grand Jury found 5 indictments against saloon keepers for selling spirituous and malt liquors without proper license. The parties will probably not be tried until next term of Court. In the meantime the County Attorney advises the saloon keepers to procure license at the next meeting of the County Board in June, which, if done would, in all probability, put an end to trials under the present indictments. By a decision of Judge Chatfield, Chaska being an incorporated village or city, the County Board has no authority whatever over the saloon keepers therein. Therefore Chaska is left out in the "cold."

NEW MAIL ROUTE.—The contract to carry the mail between Henderson and Carver, via Faxon, St. John and Mill Creek, has been let to E. B. Haney of Henderson. It is to be a weekly service, leaving Henderson Friday morning and returning Saturday, and is to go into operation on the 1st of July next.

In the presence of the general indignation at the back pay steal, Congress men are fluttering and dodging like a flock of quails when a gist of grit shot is fired into the cover. The record has been hunted up, from which it appears that the infamy was reported by the Judiciary Committee of the House, and that they advised taking $8,000 extra, instead of $5,000. Compromising on the latter sum will no doubt now be set up as a merit. Members will interpret the same plea as the member arrested for stealing. "Boss Justice, I see crazy when I took that nasty old stared hen I know I war. kase dare was a huff I'd of de finest fat pullets, and I dun gone and didn't take um. I ar crazy as a beelzug, Judge." The court, however, failed to appreciate the insanity dodge, just as the people will fail to let off public microscans on the ground that they might have stolen more.

'Sometimes Think it Were Best.'

Well, how shall I help to right the things that are going wrong?

And what can I do to hurry the promised time of peace?

The day of work is short and the night of sleep is long.

And whether to pray or preach, or whether to sing a song.

To sow my neighbor's field, or to seek the golden fleece.

Or to sit with my hands in my lap, and wish that sin would cease.

I think, sometimes, it were best to let the Lord alone.

I think some people forget He was here before they came—

It's a little for His glory, and a good deal more for their own.

That they peddle their petty schemes and baffle and babble and groan.

I sometimes think it were best, and I were less to blame.

Should I sit with my hands in my lap—in my face a crimson stain.

ALOST ART REVIVED.

The Empress Josephine's Old Palace at Venice—The Tapestries, the Tapestries, the Tapestries.

From the N. Y. Sun.

It is well known among ladies who are connoisseurs in lace, that the manufacture of old point de Venise has been among the last arts for upwards of a century.

Whenever one of our American princesses on her round of morning shopping asks for point de Venise, the salesman who is well informed in lace knows at once that the trade is not.

If he is sharp, shrewd, and unscrupulous, he practices a deception by showing the lady some other lace; if he is honest, he tells her the truth.

A representative of the Sun, while looking for items for a trade report a few days ago, gathered the following facts from a lace importer and head of the lace department in a wholesale dry goods house, whose cash receipts from sales amount to over sixty millions annually.

About five years before the fall of Paris and the capture of Napoleon III, the Empress Eugenie discovered one day among a lot of old laces, which had been transferred to her as souvenirs of the Emperor's reign, a piece of lace which she recognized as being of the same pattern as the lace which her mother-in-law had used.

The Empress Eugenie had religiously preserved as relics of her illustrious mother, about a quarter of a yard of a lace blouse of a most singular design. The ex-Empress is a diletante and connoisseur in laces as well as in many other fine arts. She saw at a glance that she possessed an art treasure, the more valuable as it was yellow with age, broken and mutilated.

She sent at once for M. de Lisle, the President of the Compagnie des Indes, and the President of the Compagnie des Indes, and the President of the Compagnie des Indes, and the President of the Compagnie des Indes.

"Monsieur, I wish this lace repaired, mended, and design, in a full lace dress for myself. Can your lace makers do it?"

Bowing low before the beautiful woman, the manufacturer replied:

"Your Royal Highness gives me a difficult commission, one, I fear, impossible to perform. You request me to repair old point de Venise, which there are but few samples in existence, and the art of making it is lost."

"Can we not revive it?" asked the Empress.

"I give you carte blanche, in making the experiment, and another carte blanche for my dress when finished."

"Madame, I will see what can be done. It is possible, it shall be accomplished," and bowing again, he retired from the royal presence, taking with him the old piece of lace.

When an Empress commands, every body listens to obey. So the President of the Compagnie des Indes lost no time. He first consulted the samples of Queen Hortense, and then the own adult experienced lace makers.

None knew the mesh. He placed it under powerful lenses—no better success. His intimacy with the lace makers, however fine, no fingers the most skilled, could tell how it could be reproduced. Our manufacturer was perplexed, but not in despair. His next step was to ransack the whole empire for the oldest lace makers living.

About forty old women, sexagenarians and octogenarians, were taken to Paris. They were provided with the best of glasses and the most powerful hand lenses. One after the other they examined the mesh. Alas! not one knew the mesh. M. de Lisle was almost desperate. He had tried adult ingenuity and the experience of the most intelligent workers—those with the strongest eyes and deftest fingers. To each he gave a section of the old sample. They were provided with lenses and every appliance for work. In the mean time they were secluded and given every necessary comfort, so that their work might be perfect.

He watched the work from day to day and week to week; still no progress. At length he turned to the Empress. At length he turned to the Empress. At length he turned to the Empress.

"At length he turned to the Empress. At length he turned to the Empress. At length he turned to the Empress."

THE LOSS OF THE ATLANTIC.

A False Alarm at a Prison's Funeral.

Secretly, the funeral of a man named...

At about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon a rumor spread through the streets of Trenton that the gallery of St. John's Roman Catholic Church had fallen and that a large number of people had been killed.

Excited crowds hurried toward the scene, and messengers were sent in all directions for physicians. It was currently reported that nearly 100 persons had been killed; that the building was on fire, and many persons were buried in the ruins. The fire department turned out, and the excitement was greater than was ever before known in Trenton. The reports, however, had been grossly exaggerated.

No one has been killed, though a large number are badly and some fatally injured. The church, which holds about 1,000 persons, was densely crowded by members of St. John's parish and by the friends of the deceased.

Rev. Father MacIn, the senior priest, while the services were in progress a woman in the gallery fainted from the heat of the room.

As she was being borne out, the effort to push through the crowded aisles, a wooden bench, on which a number of the ladies were kneeling, gave way with a loud cracking noise, which was heard throughout the church. A cry was raised—"The gallery is falling!" and a fearful panic instantly ensued.

The whole parish, who were seated to catch the infection of fear, with the suddenness and completeness of electric shock. The priests and others at the altar, the organist, the chorists, the sexton, the sexton, the sexton.

The foremost of the panic-stricken throng were hurried off their feet and fell upon the sidewalk, while those who followed were crowded on top of them by others who were hurrying to the church, in their struggles to escape, more resembled madmen than human beings.

Old women and children, mothers with infants in their arms, were mixed in one almost insupportable mass. For a time it was utterly impossible for those gathered on the outside of the building and who had been attracted by the report of the disaster, to render any assistance to the unfortunate victims.

In the meantime the fear-crazed crowd in the church, finding their egress blocked by the mass of people wedged in the doorway, felt the necessity of calling upon the saints to protect them. The priests who officiated at the funeral escaped from the rear of the church, the sexton, the sexton, the sexton.

Some of those who were thus saved were found to be injured, but, fortunately, none were dead.

Some were wedged in so tightly that it required the united exertions of several strong men to extricate them from their perilous position. Some of the children are known to be fatally injured, though none of them had died up to the time of the disaster.

All the physicians of the city, with scarcely an exception, hastened to the scene, and used their utmost exertions to relieve the suffering, while citizens of all classes seconded their efforts by every means in their power. After the tumult had subsided, the funeral services were concluded with a solemnity greatly increased by the calamity which had interrupted and shadowed them.

History of the Black Crook Play.

The circumstances of the "Black Crook" are very curious. Mr. Barris, of the Spring of 1866 called upon Mr. Wheatley, then manager of Niblo's theatre, and asked him to produce a play of the "Black Crook."

It was taken as a theatrical play and nothing more. Mr. Wheatley looked over it and decided not to produce it. In the meantime, however, the Academy of Music burned and Mr. Harry Palmer was left with a large ballet troupe on his hands which he could not get rid of.

As she was being borne out, the effort to push through the crowded aisles, a wooden bench, on which a number of the ladies were kneeling, gave way with a loud cracking noise, which was heard throughout the church. A cry was raised—"The gallery is falling!" and a fearful panic instantly ensued.

The whole parish, who were seated to catch the infection of fear, with the suddenness and completeness of electric shock. The priests and others at the altar, the organist, the chorists, the sexton, the sexton, the sexton.

The foremost of the panic-stricken throng were hurried off their feet and fell upon the sidewalk, while those who followed were crowded on top of them by others who were hurrying to the church, in their struggles to escape, more resembled madmen than human beings.

Old women and children, mothers with infants in their arms, were mixed in one almost insupportable mass. For a time it was utterly impossible for those gathered on the outside of the building and who had been attracted by the report of the disaster, to render any assistance to the unfortunate victims.

In the meantime the fear-crazed crowd in the church, finding their egress blocked by the mass of people wedged in the doorway, felt the necessity of calling upon the saints to protect them. The priests who officiated at the funeral escaped from the rear of the church, the sexton, the sexton, the sexton.

Some of those who were thus saved were found to be injured, but, fortunately, none were dead.

Some were wedged in so tightly that it required the united exertions of several strong men to extricate them from their perilous position. Some of the children are known to be fatally injured, though none of them had died up to the time of the disaster.

All the physicians of the city, with scarcely an exception, hastened to the scene, and used their utmost exertions to relieve the suffering, while citizens of all classes seconded their efforts by every means in their power. After the tumult had subsided, the funeral services were concluded with a solemnity greatly increased by the calamity which had interrupted and shadowed them.

History of the Black Crook Play.

It was taken as a theatrical play and nothing more. Mr. Wheatley looked over it and decided not to produce it. In the meantime, however, the Academy of Music burned and Mr. Harry Palmer was left with a large ballet troupe on his hands which he could not get rid of.
